Newport News, Va., March 12—James Goode, alias Joe Jones, alias "Midnight," a negro ex-convict, was found guilty to-day of the murder of Julius Smith, a Jefferson Avenue merchant, who was set upon and mortally heaten with an iron pike at his store on January 20, and his punishment was fixed at death in the electric chair.
Goode fled the city after the crime, but was caught at Petersburg two days later and confessed to the officer.

In his confession he implicated Robert Bates, a young negro, claiming that Bates was acquitted by a Jury today, it being proved that Goode had told fellow-prisoners in the site of the service of James.
